I've been playing piano since I was three years old. That is a LONG time ago. You can read more about that on the Introduction Page. God only knows how I survived childhood.

My mother had a near operatic voice and had sung with a couple of bands during the war, (when she wasn't helping to build bombers.) My brother was a similarly talented baritone that sang first in the church and school choirs and then at Texas in the University Men's Choir. My dad couldn't carry a tune in a bucket. Guess whose singing genes I ended up with?

If one of my uncles had gone to Nashville instead of law school, he might have anticipated Roy Orbison. He sang just like him and was a lot better guitarist. Another uncle played a concert tuba in college. An aunt by marriage sang with a USO band. One grandmother was a soprano in the church choir. One grandpa was a piano player - the other played fiddle with his brothers in a country band. My brother was also a pretty decent guitarist. So - as an annoying little brat I grew up around musical talent.

One last thing. It was strictly an unfortunate coincidence that most of my music teachers ended up in mental health facilities. Hmmm - there were also a number of my regular teachers that also ended up in the "home." A regular epidemic - I think it must have been caused by something in the home town water supply.
